Dalby State High School Year 11 business students gained valuable insight into modern information systems thanks to a visit to the BMO Business Centre recently.

BMO Partners Peter McKinnon and Michelle McVeigh welcomed the students before they were given a tour of the premises which included offices and the filing procedure.

The students were taught about the paperless direction BMO has recently implemented and given an overview on the electronic filing and document management system.

DSHS business teacher Leanne Kane thanked BMO for giving the students "a valuable experience".

"They gained an insight into the operations of a modern and professional firm," Mrs Kane said.

Peter McKinnon said it was a great opportunity for the students to visit a locally owned business.

"It's important for the students to recognise the links between what they are studying and how businesses operate in the real world," Mr McKinnon said.

Year 11 students were looking to the future when they learnt about BMO's paperless direction which call for an emphasis on electronic filing and document management.
